

Abstract

The present invention relates to a method of propagating and cultivating species of the genus Musa (and in particular bananas) by planting a whole defoliated sucker of this species substantially horizontally in the ground.